

What Legacy Will Adults Leave Children of the World?

True role models and heartfelt dialogues give children a chance to thrive as they learn to understand life and their interconnectedness with spirit.

By Karen Andresen

As millions of adults world-wide awaken to their greatest potential, now is the time to give a child in your life the same opportunity to connect with a heightened sense of conscious awareness through the commitment and examples they see in their world. It's the legacy adults owe every child on the planet. As profound writings, seminars, and media events based on a strong union between science and spirituality are made available to the adult population, it is paramount that our children receive the same abundant opportunities to explore, develop, and implement life skills that reflect exemplary, compassionate attitudes now being awakened on a global, heartfelt level.

For personal and collective growth there is urgency at hand. It is important that adults connect deeper and convey with clarity understandings that ring true to children of all ages concerning the very complex challenges they face with the current paradigm shift occurring.
