

Trust Your Intuition

by Maureen Brennan

It's been quite the eventful summer for me. I experienced many miracles. Since my life and work revolve around using the gift of intuition, I thought I would share one miracle story that happened this summer in New York City.

My daughter Siara, 14, and I visited my daughter Jen, 27, and grandson Jack, five, in Saugerties, New York for three weeks in July. On Wednesday, July 18, my two daughters and I went to New York City for a day of shopping. We drove to Tarrytown and parked the car at a meter, depositing enough change so we could park until 6:45 p.m. We then took the half-hour train ride into Grand Central Station at 42nd Street and Lexington Avenue. We spent the day shopping near the Empire State Building on 34th Street.

When I looked at my watch at 4:45 p.m., a very strong urge to leave the city came over me. My rational mind said that we had plenty of time to catch the train north to Tarrytown before the meter ran out at 6:45 p.m., but the powerful intuitive urge to leave became stronger.

I told my two daughters that we had to leave immediately. Thankfully, they followed me as we trotted through the streets of the city trying to hail a cab to Grand Central Station. It was rush hour so no cabs were available. We ran all the way to the station with me in the lead.

I kept looking back to make sure my girls were behind me, feeling so strongly that we just had to get out of the city.

Finally we ran through the doorway into Grand Central Station. Jen guided us to the track where our train was waiting and as we ran onto the train the doors literally slammed shut behind us. We just made it on the 5:18.

We arrived at Tarrytown, got into the car and drove to visit my brother Tom and his wife Tess in Nyack before heading back to Saugerties. As we sat on their couch the news was on TV. Just before 6 p.m. that evening there was an explosion of an underground pipeline at 41st Street and Lexington Avenue. It caused a crater in the street and one person was killed. The trains were shut down at Grand Central Station in case of further explosions. We had gotten on the last train to Tarrytown out of the station about a half-hour before the explosion which was just a block away.

I sat there with my mouth open in shock, gratitude and with relief. Thank you, Divine, for your guidance and protection.

Thankfully I listened to my intuition, rather than the rational mind. In my daily prayers I include prayers of protection. That evening, I thanked the universe for once again guiding and protecting me and my loved ones.

We are always guided by Spirit. The guidance is within us. The key is to pay attention to it and follow it even when it makes no sense to us. The more we listen to our intuition the stronger it gets.

The rational mind is limited. Our intuition is the direct link to the guidance of our higher power which is unlimited. Trust it. Trust yourself. Trust in Source. All things are possible for those who believe.
